Bio Sketch
Brendan Hokowhitu is Ngāti Pukenga. Currently, Hokowhitu is Senior Lecturer within Te Tumu, the School of Māori, Pacific and Indigenous Studies at the University of Otago, Dunedin, Aotearoa/New Zealand, where he is the Programme Coordinator of the Masters of Indigenous Studies. Brendan's research focuses on the deconstruction of dominant representations of Māori and, in particular, Māori masculinity. Hokowhitu has gained research grants to examine the myths surrounding Māori masculine violence, and representations of Māori within the print-news media.

Area(s) of Expertise
Indigenous masculinity
Poststructuralism
Postcolonialism
Sport, physical education and education.

Current Research Activities
Indigenous masculinity manuscript

Two Key Publications